13 October 2020

10:00 – 11:30 (Berlin time, GMT+2) 4:00 – 5:30 (New York time, GMT-4) 15:00 – 16:30 (Bangkok time, GMT+7) Check here your local time	Incorporating the principle of ‘leave no one behind’ in planning and decision making Moderation: Saionara König-Reis, Danish Institute of Human Rights Inputs: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Soumya Chattopadhyay, Overseas Development Institute - Andreas Schaller, Ministry of Social Affairs, Health, Care and Consumer Protection, Austria - Annie Namala, Wada Na Todo Abhiyan, India - Petronella Mukaindo, Kenya National Commission on Human Rights Question: The commitment to ‘leave no one behind’ is an integral cornerstone of the 2030 Agenda for sustainable development. Since the beginning of SDGs and their monitoring and voluntary national reviews, how have governments integrated the LNOB commitment into their development programme design, practices, and VNRs? ODI has been monitoring and analysing this crucial aspect since 2017 in their annual LNOB Index across 159 countries. Outcome: This webinar will discuss the findings of the 2020 LNOB Index, including interesting patterns but also some disconcerting results – both in terms of creating enabling conditions to meet this commitment (a measure of “readiness”) as well as of outcomes that fulfil the commitment enshrined in the 2030 Agenda. It will also discuss how the experiences of participants from Austria, India and Kenya are concretely contributing to LNOB and in how far they connect to the LNOB Index. Speakers will also be able to reflect on how the principle of LNOB can be and is being translated into policy design and action in national ministries, grass-roots community organisation and national human rights institutions, and how metrics such as the LNOB Index can help these efforts. We will also have a chance to discuss some persistent systemic impediments and assess the illustrations of some successful remedial actions that could act as guide to other countries and organisations.
15:00 – 16:30 (Berlin time, GMT+2) 9:00 – 10:30 (New York time, GMT-4) 20:00 – 21:30 (Bangkok time, GMT+7) Check here your local time	Success factors for sustainable development councils and similar multi-stakeholder advisory bodies Moderation: Zosa De Sas Kropiwnicki-Gruber and Mike Simpson (British Columbia Council for International Cooperation) Insights from SD – Councils and similar bodies: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Jan Mertens, FRDO-CFDD, Belgium - Tamar Iakobidze, Caucasus Environmental NGO Network, Georgia - Florence Syevuo, SDGs Kenya Forum - Hannah Janetschek, German Council for Sustainable Development (RNE) Question: Sustainability councils have been advising governments on the implementation of national sustainability strategies and policies for decades; however, previous studies have not systematically identified success factors for the long-term engagement of sustainability councils at the national level. A current Global Forum study (undertaken by BCCIC) is analysing success factors and governance mechanisms for establishing and maintaining a multi-stakeholder council or similar body and will answer the following question, which will be discussed in the webinar: How heterogeneous are these Councils in their Multi-Stakeholder character and approaches for SDG-delivery? How do Councils and similar advisory bodies maintain their roles as a source of knowledge and advice to their governments in SDG implementation? Outcome: Critical discussion on the importance of multi-stakeholder bodies in accelerating 2030 Agenda implementation by promoting fundamental principles such as accountability, transparency and leave no one behind, and by embodying whole-of-society approaches to constructively engage with governments on SDG-delivery.

To what extent do these activities involve non-state actors? Outcome: This webinar will provide an overview of recent national experiences and lessons learnt concerning follow-up to the VNR and how second and subsequent VNRs can build on the previous reviews.
15:00 – 16:30 (Berlin time, GMT+2) 9:00 – 10:30 (New York time, GMT-4) 20:00 – 21:30 (Bangkok time, GMT+7) Check here your local time	Private sector (data) contributions for SDG review and VNRs Moderation: Philipp Schönrock (Cepei) Inputs: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Bernhard Frey, UN Global Compact - Pietro Bertazzi, Carbon Disclosure Project / Charlotte Portier, Global Reporting Initiative - Monika Gorzelak, Statistics Poland / Aleksandra Kretkowska, CSR Consulting - Ricardo Garzón Torres, Telefónica Colombia Question: How can private sector stakeholders at national and global level contribute to SDG monitoring? Outcome: This webinar will showcase different ways for private sector to support SDG monitoring activities not only by providing data for being used in official national statistics as a public good, but also by supporting capacity building for the use of data or linking CSR (corporate social responsibility) reporting to the SDGs.

10:00 – 11:30 (Berlin time, GMT+2) 4:00 – 5:30 (New York time, GMT-4) 15:00 – 16:30 (Bangkok time, GMT+7) Check here your local time	SDG monitoring at different levels: Local and national approaches Moderation: Christian Luy (Development Partners Network on Decentralisation and Local Governance (DeLoG)) Inputs: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Francine Melchiorretto, UNDP-ART - Christine Rehberger, Regionalmanagement OÖ GmbH, Austria - Isaac Tettey, Regional Economic Planning Officer, Volta Region, Ghana Question: What can actors at the sub-national level do to support SDG monitoring and close data gaps? Outcome: The great relevance of local monitoring approaches is ever-present in the current discussion around SDG reporting. Efforts are being made at all levels to increase the availability of local indicators, collect disaggregated data, align local indicator frameworks with national and global reporting structures, and to find ways for self-reflecting on local SDG implementation. This webinar will showcase different examples of how these efforts - from the global to the local level - can look like and what are key success and challenging factors.
15:00 – 16:30 (Berlin time, GMT+2) 9:00 – 10:30 (New York time, GMT-4) 20:00 – 21:30 (Bangkok time, GMT+7) Check here your local time	How can universities contribute to SDG monitoring and VNRs? Moderation: Eve de la Mothe Karoubi (Sustainable Development Solutions Network) Inputs: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Henrique dos Santos Pereira, Universidade Federal do Amazonas, Brazil - Ingunn Gunnarsdóttir, University of Iceland - Lesley Stone, University of Auckland, New Zealand - Miguel Ruiz Cabañas Izquierdo, Monterrey Institute of Technology, Mexico Question: How can universities leverage their academic capabilities to strengthen SDG monitoring? What are opportunities to get involved in SDG monitoring besides direct contributions to VNRs? Outcome: This webinar will present different approaches of how universities can engage in SDG monitoring processes. Besides direct contributions to VNRs (e.g. through participating in prioritisation and evaluation exercises of indicators for national reporting), universities can strengthen SDG monitoring through joining forces with other universities or producing own sustainability reports. At the sub-national level, universities may provide sub-national data to raise awareness and help local governments incorporating the SDGs into their planning.

Is there a need to review national mechanisms in order to make them more resilient? Outcome: This closing webinar will discuss how the impacts of the current health crisis might influence future follow-up and review processes from the national to the global level, and which efforts need to be undertaken to adapt them accordingly.
